CALL FOR HUMANITIES COLLABORATIVE RESEARCH AWARD PROPOSALS

For the 2015-16 Academic Year

The Center for Ideas and Society invites applications for the Humanities Collaborative Research awards. The awards will be granted to projects designed to support collaborative and interdisciplinary engagement among graduate students. The awards may, for example, be used to host a workshop or reading group, to produce a graduate student conference, or to foster cross-college and cross-school collaborations among fellow graduates.

Who May Apply
Any UCR graduate student

Funding Criteria
Projects are encouraged to cross humanities disciplinary boundaries by embracing the arts, social sciences, physical sciences, engineering, and other applicable fields of study.

Application Forms
The Application form can be obtained at the Center for Ideas and Society website: http://ideasandsociety.ucr.edu/funding/graduate-students. Applications must be complete in order to be considered by the Center’s Advisory Committee.

Amount of Funding
Proposals can receive a maximum of $500. Additional funding sources will be factored into the evaluation process. Final awards are contingent upon available funding.

Deadlines
Applications must be postmarked by March 2, 2015.
